

MEET KELSEY

“I will never be anything less than completely honest with you. You’re the client, but you’re also part of our team.”
 — Kelsey Sheronas

Kelsey focuses her practice on bankruptcy and business reorganizations, advocating for a diverse range of clients including lenders, creditors, real estate developers, investors, individuals, private clients, and nonprofit organizations.

With a focus on protecting people’s interests, she is driven by a belief that those unfamiliar with the legal system are most vulnerable. With a combination of knowledge, skill, and determination, Kelsey diligently prepares to advocate for her clients’ best interests. She begins by understanding each client’s objectives and devising tailored strategies, whether through litigation or negotiation, to achieve favorable outcomes.

Kelsey embraces her inner nerd with a love for video, board, and tabletop games like Dungeons and Dragons. Beyond gaming, she finds joy in reading and occasionally experiments with writing. Kelsey also enjoys hiking through nearby parks.

EXPERIENCE

Kelsey has experience in handling cases involving fraud, consumer protection, RICO, data privacy, public nuisance, and constitutional claims. She’s skilled in drafting motions and arguments for federal district and appellate-level courts. She also has experience in preparing clients for depositions.

As a legal intern, she researched First Amendment rights in higher education and helped create a model policy for student fees.

Before law school, Kelsey worked at a media agency in California, where she managed contracts and foreign rights for various titles. She reviewed, drafted, negotiated, and finalized agreements with publishers, authors, and business partners for deals of up to seven figures. Her proficiency in conducting forensic audits was instrumental in ensuring compliance and accuracy.

Additionally, Kelsey made notable editorial contributions to publications such as The Book of Joy, Anticancer Living, and Eight Dates.
