

MEET MIN

“Through a personalized approach, I am able to partner with my clients to develop sophisticated strategies to address the corporate and employee goals and objectives while mitigating potential delay, expense and liability associated with immigration process.”

— Min S. Suh

Min concentrates her practice exclusively on employment-based immigration law. She represents corporations in a wide range of industries including financial services, manufacturing, information technology, universities and secondary schools, health care and nonprofit organizations. Min assists international companies with their immigration issues during acquisitions, mergers, global relocations and downsizings. She advises companies in developing “best practices” programs in I-9 Compliance and Verification, and has significant experience in worksite enforcement. Min has extensive experience in handling government investigations including on-site audits, depositions and appellate litigation.

Min firmly believes in the positive impact of a strong visa program on employee morale and productivity, which give companies competitive edge in the market for global talent, and for over 20 years, she has assisted her clients to attract and retain superior talent regardless of nationality. In representing international companies, Min coordinates the firm’s multi-disciplinary practice, including employment and labor, tax counseling, employee benefits and any other related matters to address ancillary issues in the global mobilization of personnel.

EXPERIENCE

As a former legislative assistant to a national government relations firm, Min actively engages government agencies and representatives on legislative and regulatory issues. She provides proactive counsel to employers and individuals in employment-based immigration matters.

Min's professional experience includes the following:

- Representing multinational and domestic corporations in employment-based immigration matters before the U.S. Departments of Homeland Security, Labor and State
- Representing companies and individuals in immigration-related administrative and federal court litigation, including defense of enforcement actions and federal court review of agency actions
- Developing management strategies and compliance programs, and performing due diligence to assess possible penalties and minimize deficiencies
- Representing employers in employer sanctions cases under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986
- Counseling individuals of extraordinary ability, including professional athletes, academic researchers, professors, international medical graduates and physicians, as well as individuals whose immigration is in the national interest in obtaining immigration benefits
- Counseling companies in developing effective global mobility policies and assisting them in establishing compliance programs on a global basis
- Representing employers in employment and immigration matters before administrative agencies such as the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, U.S. Department of Justice and U.S. Department of Homeland Security
