"I enjoy supporting clients on their journey to dual citizenship. Most need specific court orders to progress, and while I'm just one part of their path, the best moments are when clients reach out to share they've officially achieved citizenship. "

— Trisha R. Hudkins

Trish is an attorney in Obermayer's Litigation Department, focusing her practice in dual citizenship and complex commercial litigation. She assists clients pursuing dual citizenship by developing creative solutions for the unique challenges they encounter. Trish secures court orders for essential vital records, including birth certificates, record amendments, and delayed birth records, which are critical for citizenship applications.

Frequently, these documents present discrepancies in names, dates, or ages that must be addressed before submission. Trish has extensive experience obtaining "one and the same" (OATS) orders in numerous states to resolve such inconsistencies. Her support extends beyond the courtroom, helping clients manage the administrative and familial obstacles common in dual citizenship processes. She collaborates with service providers and Italian attorneys to ensure clients obtain the necessary orders for citizenship.

In addition to her work in dual citizenship, Trish has advised both regional and national corporations on complex commercial litigation in areas like financial services, oil and gas, employment, and real estate. She is a trusted advisor in crafting legal strategy, managing risk, and efficiently resolving matters.

When not in the office, Trish enjoys reading, working out, spending time with her husband, two young daughters, and pets. She also loves exploring different towns and discovering new places.
